Eddie Honeycutt named Pahokee Citizen of Year

By Jennie M. Sears
Staff Reporter

Eddie Honeycutt is a laid back kind of guy, never expecting attention or notice. He's not looking for recognition. For years he has been taking his profits from various sales, especially Christmas tree sales, and putting those profits back into the community in the way of baskets of food for the needy, providing Santa Claus and goodies to children at Christmas, and feeding literally hundreds a delicious, hot meal for Christmas.

Eddie has expanded his business and restored a building in the downtown Main Street area, putting his faith into the community and its future.

Last Thursday, February 5, at Pahokee's Chamber Banquet, Mr. Honeycutt was presented the Citizen of the Year Award for his dedication and hard work in the city of Pahokee.

Health Care District one step closer to regaining control of Pahokee hospital

The Palm Beach County Health Care District received a favorable judgement Feb. 2, from Judge John Cook to move ahead in assuming control of Everglades Regional Medical Center. This judgement follows Everglades Regional Medical Center's failure to accept a settlement offer from the district, which had proposed a process they say would have had minimum effect on employees, patients and the community. Without a settlement, the Health Care District proceeded with a request of the court to resolve seven years of litigation between the two parties.

With the exception of a public records request, an order will be entered to end a costly court battle and will return Everglades Regional Medical Center to public control. Health Care District officials say it is unclear why the Board of Directors of Everglades Regional Medical Center did not sign the settlement agreement, which they say would have provided for the orderly transfer of management to the district. During the court docket this week, it is anticipated a final decision will be made.

DEAD AT THE SCENE... A mock disaster drill was held last week by Glades General Hospital, Everglades Regional Medical Center's EMS division, Belle Glade fire and police and Palm Beach County Fire Rescue. A three-car accident was staged at Pioneer Park on SR 715 and involved 12 patients. Jim McQuaig, paramedic firefighter, said it was a learning process for everyone and they would all get together after the drill to see where improvements could be made.

Moratorium suggested to keep city employees living in town

By Brenda Bunting
Editor

Belle Glade City officials are divided on whether to immediately place a moratorium on letting city employees live outside the town or waiting until a study tells them how to keep them here.

Vice Mayor D. Bill Mathis asked for Monday night's workshop. In his opening statement, he said he would not expect city employees who live elsewhere to move back, but he would like to see an immediate policy change that would require all new hires to live in the city or move to Belle Glade within six months to a year. This would apply to any future hires of firefighters, police officers and city administrators.

Mathis also wants an outside firm to do an independent salary and benefit survey for all city employees, "so the commissioners might have a look at the problems we might be facing and where we should go from here," he said.

The vice mayor has expressed his concern about police, fire and key city officials living outside the city. The commission agreed last year to allow firefighters and police officers to live in other towns as long as their response time was within an hour if they were called in.

Police Chief and Safety Director Michael Miller says he reluctantly made the request because he was losing so many employees due to low pay. He said the money was not available in the city's budget to make the substantial increases in salary for police and fire. He felt addressing employees second most cited concern, the city's long standing residency requirement, might stop the turnover. The policy change has been in effect just over six months, too early, Miller says, to determine if it is working.

Mathis, a former City of Belle Glade Police Chief, says he wants the policy reversed. "The city should take this lead in having control over the city employees, to live inside the city and take part in the city," said Mathis. "I'm very, very strongly against the public safety people living outside the town," said Mathis.

Mayor Steve Weeks agreed with Mathis that an independent study should be done, but wants to wait until after that information is available to place a moratorium, or even see if one is needed.

"We've got to look further and see why people want to leave," said Commissioner Dan Herring. "I have a problem with forcing people to live here who don't want to live here, for whatever reason," he said.

Some of the reasons given by people not wanting to live in Belle Glade that were brought up in the meeting were lack of social activities, limited shopping establishments, concerns about the public school system and health care.

Mayor Weeks and Commissioner Herring said they would like to see the city address these concerns before making a policy that city employees be required to live here.

"I believe the city should take the lead in this," Mathis said. "It's going to take money and it's going to take time, but it's not fair for us to snap our fingers and say 'okay, everybody move back into the city.' There's been houses bought, there's been investments made, other considerations, that would make it impossible for us to do a turnaround, but we can start it."

"We can stop the bleeding now, and develop that policy. We've lost too much in Belle Glade and Belle Glade is too important to let that happen," Mathis said.

Shaken Baby Syndrome

By Paula Swaford

There is probably nothing else that renders parents and caretakers of children so totally frustrated and helpless as a crying child. If they could only tell us what was wrong... then we could "fix it." But they cannot; all they can do is cry and cry and cry. When the frustration causes parents and caregivers to reach the breaking point, many of them resort to shaking the baby with hopes that it will stop the incessant crying. However, not only does this inappropriate method not cause the baby to stop crying, it can be the cause of a severe form of head injury known as Shaken Baby Syndrome (SBS).

SBS can occur when a baby is shaken forcibly enough to cause the baby's brain to rebound or bounce against his or her skull. This rebounding may cause bruising, swelling, and bleeding of the brain, which may lead to permanent, severe brain damage or death. About one-third of the American public doesn't know it is dangerous to shake a baby or young child. People who shake children hard are most likely to be men in their early twenties, often daddies or other males who are taking care of a baby alone for a short period of time.

Symptoms of SBS may include changes in behavior, irritability, lethargy, loss of consciousness, pale or bluish skin, vomiting, and convulsions. Although there usually are no outward physical signs of trauma, there may be broken, injured, or dislocated bones and injuries to the neck and spine. Treatment is immediate emergency intervention to stop internal bleeding and relieve increased pressure in the brain. The outcome or prognosis is poor. Most will be left with considerable disability, and possibly loss of vision. If the child survives, he or she may require lifelong medical care for brain damaging injuries, such as mental retardation or cerebral palsy.

Everyone can become angry or frustrated when caring for children, but they need to know that when they are angry and afraid they may hurt or shake a baby. Instead of picking up the child, Dr. Charles Mahan, State of Florida Health Officer, recommends the following:

Count to 10; take deep breaths, call someone (Parents Anonymous has a free 24-hour Hotline at 1-800-352-5683), play music, read a book, exercise, have a cup of tea or coffee, or sit down and close your eyes and relax. Other suggestions include: placing the baby in a safe place, like a crib, and leave the room for a few minutes, take a shower or bath, shake a rug, hug a pillow, think about how much you really love your baby and wouldn't want to do anything to hurt him/her, or ask a trusted friend or relative to "take over" for a little while, and don't pick up your baby again until you feel calm. In Florida, professional assistance is available at 1-800-FLA-LOVE. Remember that one shake can last a lifetime: NEVER, NEVER, NEVER SHAKE A BABY!!!

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation to all of you who have taken the time to read this little column for the past five years. Maybe it has met some of your needs and perhaps enlightened you to the continual need for healthcare education. Most of all, perhaps it has made you think and question when things aren't right. There are many people in our community, more qualified than I, to write a weekly health column. After I step down, this will enable them to do so. So I thank you once again, and say... stay informed and stay healthy.

CHILDREN'S HEALTH CORNER

By Faye Brandenburg

What a pleasure it was over the holidays to have my seven-month old grandson with us from Virginia. Even with my son and his new family living far away, I haven't been deprived of the "grandmother" privileges. While nothing replaces the one on one, hands on visits we've had (five so far), the many telephone calls updating me on his every move, new accomplishments, finding his toes and fingers, realizing he has a voice, fevered nights, crying spells and more, have helped to nourish the special bonding grandparents have with their grandchildren.

Little Tyler was chewing on everything in sight and drooling like Niagara Falls, signaling the teething process had officially begun. Teeth begin to push through the gums when your baby is about six months old. The process can make the gums red and sensitive, and some babies will be fussy and irritable with every tooth that erupts and continues until all 20 teeth come through, at about age 2 1/2.

Just rubbing your baby's gums with your finger may make him feel better. Sometimes a little tender care can ease the discomfort of a teething baby, cuddling your baby, rocking him or walking with him often can make him feel better. Doctors agree chewing can make tender gums feel better. "Give your baby a clean washcloth to chew on," suggests Beverly Hunt, CFNP. "Wrapping a piece of ice in a cotton cloth and rubbing this gently on the gums helps to numb them and the pressure seems to feel good, too." Be sure that the ice itself doesn't touch the gum and make sure you keep the wrapped ice moving rather than holding it in one place.

Teething rings with liquid centers intended for freezing are great for gum relief, however, Pediatrician Philip Colaizzo, M.D. says instead of freezing the ring, chill it in the refrigerator instead. "A child who holds a frozen teething ring against his gums can actually get frostbitten gums. Refrigerating them gets the rings cool enough to comfort the baby's gums without the potential harm from direct ice." If your baby is in serious discomfort or having trouble sleeping because of teething pain, call your doctor and ask about giving an over-the-counter pain reliever such as acetaminophen (Children's Tylenol). Be sure to get a pain reliever that's specifically for infants, and check with your doctor for correct usage. Products that numb the gums can help ease gum pain, just be sure to follow directions on the package for use.

Teething can cause your child to be uncomfortable, but it usually doesn't require medical care. Teething does not normally cause fever, vomiting, diarrhea, or loss of appetite, says Dr. Colaizzo. If your child has any of these symptoms, they're likely caused by some other condition. As always, when in doubt, check with your physician and remember, children are special.

February is National Children's Dental Health Month and the Florida Dental Association celebrates by teaching new parents how to care for their infant's teeth.

New parents sometimes don't realize the importance of caring for their infant's teeth. The FDA says that serious tooth decay can affect very young children. Although a child's primary teeth are eventually replaced by permanent ones, the primary teeth are critical for proper chewing, speaking, and appearance. Great care should be taken to keep them clean and healthy.

The primary teeth of an infant or young child can be affected by baby-bottle tooth decay, also called nursing-bottle mouth. This condition develops when a baby frequently receives a bottle of milk, formula, fruit juice or sweetened liquids, which are meant to serve as a pacifier.

Prolonged "demand" breast feeding also may cause this condition. Although the teeth most likely to be affected are the upper front teeth, others may be affected.

Tooth decay is caused by bacteria, which are present in a thin film of plaque that constantly forms on teeth. The bacteria use sugar as an energy source and they produce acids that attack the tooth enamel. Frequent, lengthy exposure to sugary liquid can result in acids attacking the child's teeth. After many such attacks, tooth decay can occur.

All types of sugars, including those in bottle and breast milk, formula, fruit juices, and sweetened liquids can cause plaque bacteria to produce decay-causing acids. How often a child receives a bottle containing these liquids and for how long the child's teeth are exposed to decay-causing acids are two important factors.

The FDA says parents can help protect their baby's teeth by doing the following:

After each feeding, wipe the child's teeth and gums with a clean, damp washcloth or gauze pad to remove plaque. Begin brushing your child's teeth as soon as the first tooth erupts (breaks through the gums). This usually occurs by six months.

"Don't put a baby to bed with a bottle of milk, formula, fruit juice, or sweetened liquid."

"If your child needs a comforter between regular feedings, at night, or during naps, fill a nursing bottle with cool water or give the child a clean pacifier dipped in any sweet liquid."

"Avoid filling a nursing bottle with liquids such as sugar water, sweetened gelatin, or soft drinks."

Make sure your child gets the fluoride needed for decay-resistant teeth. Talk to your dentist about recommended methods for obtaining the proper amount of fluoride.

*Schedule regular checkups beginning by the child's first birthday.

The FDA is a statewide professional organization that strives to improve public health and promote the art and science of dentistry. With a membership of about 6,300 licensed dentists, the FDA represents almost 78 percent of all licensed dentists in Florida.

Song and dance unprofessional

"I'm calling to address the issue of the article that appeared on the front page of the Palm Beach Post on Wednesday, Feb. 4, regarding Coach Pete Walker's recent traffic citation.

It's my opinion, and many others share the same feeling, that Judge Miller turned the courtroom into a circus with this display.

It sounded like something off the T.V. sitcom show "Night Court." Since when was performing a song and dance routine an option on getting out of paying a traffic fine? If he was guilty of speeding 16 miles over the speed limit, Walker should be treated like the rest of us. Anyone else would have been forced to pay and have points assessed. But because he was associated with Glades Day School he got off scot free. Definitely something wrong with this picture.

Also letting a very, very poor example for people of our community, is the fact that our chief of police was involved in this circus performance.

It's an embarrassment to our community and very unfair to anyone else who goes through Judge Miller's courtroom and gets the fine and points slapped on them whether they can afford it or not.

Sentencing may be at the discretion of the judge but this is ridiculous and there should be some definite guidelines set.

Thank you."

Chief Miller responds: "I respect the caller's opinion. Thank goodness we live in a country where good people can disagree."

Thanks for Speak Out

"I'm calling in regard to last week's Speak Out in reference to the filthiness at Glades Central. Miss Bennett, the caller never criticized you, in fact, the caller stated you did a wonderful job and the festival was great. You have no control over the upkeep of the school."

Miss Bennett, please continue your wonderful job as a drama teacher. If only the custodians and administration at Glades Central did their jobs as well as you.

Thanks to Speak Out, those who work for the school board can speak out without any fear of retribution and let the public know of conditions such as this.

I am a school board employee and I visit Glades Central often and I do agree with the caller. Anytime I'm at Glades Central I feel that it's a doggone crying shame that a $30 million dollar school has become so littered, odorous and soiled.

Thank you."

Editor's note: We received a Speak Out concerning a problem a customer had with a local fast-food restaurant. We do not publish this type of Speak Out because we feel customers have the option of protesting by taking their business elsewhere. There are plenty of other restaurants who would love to have your business.

In direct contrast, this newspaper has been sharply criticized recently by officials who believe if private businesses and individuals are exempt from Speak Out, they should be also. I remind them that citizens can take their business elsewhere if they do not like the way they are treated as a customer. This is not true with city or county government, police, utilities, or the public school system. Citizens constantly tell me how they appreciate Speak Out and like being able to voice their opinion without fear of retribution. Many say this is their favorite part of the newspaper. ## Letters to the Editor

An open letter to the citizens of Belle Glade

To the citizens of Belle Glade and surrounding communities, I want to express my appreciation for all of the support and affirmation I have received. Since announcing my resignation as pastor of First Baptist Church of Belle Glade, in view of a call to the First Baptist Church of Parker, Florida, you have truly lived up to the reputation of being a friendly, caring community.

Belle Glade is a special community and although I have heard over and over that "some of the finest people in the world live here!" I do want to affirm my belief in that statement. We have made a number of lifelong friends here and are thankful for our time here.

Although Belle Glade faces some challenging obstacles, it is a great community. Many fine citizens are pouring their hearts, lives and resources into this community to make it a better place.

My heart will always have a special place for Belle Glade. Please know that my prayers and concern will continually be lifted up for you.

Rev. Craig Hartzog

Citizen comments on Monday's workshop

Dear Editor:

Three cheers for city commissioners D. Bill Mathis and Clay Connell for standing up for what they believe. Obviously these are the only two members of our city commission who have an open ear to their constituents. Read our lips, if our community is good enough to work for, it is good enough to live in. Remember who pays their salaries: WE, THE TAXPAYERS.

During a workshop meeting Monday evening regarding this subject, D. Bill Mathis proposed an immediate moratorium on hiring outside the city limits, and I quote "to stop the bleeding." Unfortunately, the only other commissioner to support this action was Clay Connell.

Frankly, from the comments made at this workshop, I left with the opinion that there are two schools of thought amongst the commissioners, one of hope for Belle Glade, and one of complacency. A community cannot flourish without hope and vision from its leaders and citizens, and from where I sat the majority of our leaders had neither.

Sincerely,

Olga Hayes
Belle Glade

The story behind Valentine's Day

By Mark W. Merrill
Florida Family Council

This Valentine's Day you will probably either send or receive a Valentine from someone. More than a billion are expected to be given away in the United States alone. Who gets Valentine cards? According to Hallmark Cards, people receive them in this order: teachers, children, mothers, wives, and sweethearts. The Hartz pet food company says that three percent of pet owners will even give a Valentine gift to their pets.

If you're like me, whenever Thanksgiving rolls around you picture the Pilgrims and the Indians sitting at a table breaking bread together. It's the story behind the holiday that provides the spirit of warmth, when it comes to Valentine's Day, there is also a true life story behind the holiday, and it has a lot to teach us about the true meaning of love, sacrifice and commitment.

In the third century, the Roman Empire was ruled by Emperor Claudius II Gothicus. He was nicknamed Claudius the Cruel because of his harsh leadership and his tendency for getting into wars and abusing his people. In fact, he was getting into so many wars during the third century that he was having a difficult time recruiting enough soldiers.

Claudius believed that recruitment for the army was down because Roman men did not want to leave their loved ones behind, so he canceled all marriages and engagements in Rome. Thousands of couples saw their hopes of matrimony dashed by the single act of a tyrant. And no one seemed interested in standing up to the emperor.

But a simple Christian priest named Valentine did come forward to help.

Many aging parents would rather take the risks of personal freedom than kowtow to their grown children for help with daily living, a University of Florida study finds.

"Older people whose families care for them often feel they must repay their children by deferring to their wishes," said Karen Pyke, a UF sociology professor who did the research. "Many elderly resent this loss of power and would rather do without care—even if they had to need it—than pay the price of having to be deferential and obedient toward their children."

Pyke's findings were based on 67 in-depth interviews with aging parents, adult children and adult grandchildren in 20 families in the Los Angeles area. Unlike most care giving studies, which focus on the children—usually daughters—her study relies on the perspectives of both parent and child, she said. The study was funded by a grant from the National Institute on Aging.

Conflict with parents and children could escalate, Pyke said, if not conscious politicians shift elder care from institutions such as subsidized nursing homes to unpaid family members. She said lawmakers already are concerned about the future costs of caring for millions of aging baby boomers.

"Politicians often call up a nostalgic image of the family of an earlier day, which was often mythical anyway, to invoke this notion of family values, where people care for their elderly parents," she said. "But values alone do not assure that the nation's elderly are taken care of, and politicians ignore the costs parents pay when their children take on this burden."

Elderly parents who get help with yard work shopping and transportation often feel pressure to comply with their grown children's wishes, Pyke said. For example, one elderly couple in the study reluctantly sold their house and moved into a mobile home after the wife's stroke because their adult children insisted it was too much to care for anymore.

"The smoothest, most harmonious parent-child care giving relations occurred when parents acquiesced to their children's decisions, something staunch individualistic elders are simply unwilling to do," she said.

When parents refused to obey, children became resentful and often reduced or set firm limits on how much they would help, Pyke said. Loneliness and not receiving needed care were the price parents paid for not subordinating themselves, she said.

Pyke found elderly parents in families that emphasize self-sufficiency and independence over family obligation are especially unhappy at having to be compliant when their children step in. However, even in families where parents normally received more day-to-day help from their children, failure to defer to their children's wishes or express gratitude strained relations between generations, she said.

"We need policies that don't rely on just one model of family life," Pyke said. "Politicians need to recognize that families organize themselves in different ways instead of simply viewing family-based care as a panacea for the problem of elder care in this country."

Actually, suggesting that families don't do enough is something of a myth because most elder care already occurs in families and not in nursing homes, she said.

Feeling overburdened by parental responsibilities and fears about their own future, some children feel increasingly resentful about their role, Pyke said.

For instance, she said, one 85-year-old woman's refusal to put her bed-ridden husband in a nursing home led her son, in his 60s, and his wife to wonder if they would ever have time to enjoy their boat, which had remained docked the entire year.

"For the children," Pyke said, "it was a case of wondering, 'When do we get a turn to enjoy some leisure before we get old and frail if all we're doing is helping our mother take care of our father?'"

"So much research on inter-generational helping patterns are bookkeeping efforts to say 'who gets what from whom,'" said Judith Treas, a sociology professor at the University of California at Irvine. "Karen Pyke's work has shown how people feel about family care, particularly the emotional downside of feeling put-upon or coerced into doing what you really don't want to do."

Ancient Armadillo finds home

Writer: Cathy Keen
University of Florida News

At more than 6 feet long and weighing as much as 600 pounds, this is one armadillo that likely wouldn't have ended up as road kill.

That's about the size of the armadillo University of Florida researchers say roamed the Sunshine State 10,000 years ago, and now they have a well-preserved skull to prove it.

"The skull belonged to one of two species of giant armadillo that lived in Florida during the Pleistocene Epoch, and its unusually good preservation makes it one of only a handful of its kind in the United States," said Russ McCarthy, a University of Florida senior biological scientist.

Found in a limestone quarry west of Gainesville, the skull now is at the Florida Museum of Natural History on the UF campus, where researchers are preserving and restoring the specimen so it can be stored and displayed in the building's collections.

"It's a very important specimen because it is so complete and has all its teeth," McCarthy said. "The wear patterns that we're able to see on the teeth may give us some valuable clues about these creatures' diet. We really don't know exactly what they ate. That information would give us a better understanding of the niche they occupied, their relationship to other animals, as well as the whole ecosystem of the time."

Called Holmesina septentrionalis, the beasts, like their smaller modern counterparts, spread to what now is Florida from South America. Ground sloths, tapirs and other exotic creatures followed the same route into the Sunshine State, he said.

Unlike today's armadillos that subsist on termites, ants and beetles, the ancient ones, weighing as much as 600 pounds, likely needed more substantial fare to survive, he said.

Unfused limb bones indicate the specimen was a juvenile, which may give clues both to the armadillo's growth sequence, McCarthy said. "We don't know much about juveniles or how they develop into adults," he said. "The few skulls that are found tend to be adult."

Scientist also would like to learn more about how the giant armadillos differed in its evolution from the ground sloth and glyptodont, its close relatives, he said.

Richard Hulbert, a geology professor at Georgia Southern College who saw the skull at the museum several months ago, said, "It was evident that it was much more complete than any we've previously had of these species. It certainly will be important for studying how these animals lived and trying to figure out why they became extinct."

Giant armadillos became extinct in Florida about 9,800 years ago, a period of dramatic climate change, McCarthy said. But a smaller variety continued to live in South America, as did llamas, large rodents called capybaras, and tapirs, the pig-size animals closely related to horses and rhinoceroses, all of which once roamed Florida, he said.

Because people lived in Florida 11,000 to 12,000 years ago, early humans encountered giant armadillos for a few thousand years before they disappeared, he said.

"We haven't found any evidence that people hunted them, but they were probably considered as possible food sources," he said. "Maybe the heavy armored plates on their bodies were a good defense against spear points."

The skull at UF was discovered in August. Eric Taylor, a Lake City insurance agent, showed the site to Adam Black, a biological illustrator specializing in painting extinct Pleistocene mammals, who found rabbit bones and armadillo shells sticking out of the vertical limestone cliff face in the Haile quarries. Six months later, when the two men returned, a rock slide had exposed more bones, including the skull.

Smith and Stockwell speak at missions conference at Belle Glade Alliance Church

Connie Smith and her husband, Ron, are missionaries in Quito, Ecuador, a fast-growing city of 1.5 million people. Connie is a full-time professor at Alliance Bible Seminary and also serves as the director of Christian education and the women's and men's choir at La Luz Church in that city. She says they are really working in the church to minister God's love to the husbands of many women in the congregation. Many of these men don't have a personal relationship with Christ. She says, "I was burdened by this so much that I began a ministry called 'My Beloved Unbeliever.'" She says they are seeing positive results of this effort. "These women have banded together to encourage each other. We have seen some of these husbands make a decision to follow the Lord," Connie also has been a mentor to young Christian women.

Connie Smith is a missionary serving with The Christian and Missionary Alliance, a global missionary church. Missionary David Stockwell has been training pastors in the Philippines since 1970. He serves as an associate professor at Ebenezer Bible College and Seminary in Zamboanga City, West Mindanao, where he is the head of the Bible and Theology Department. In addition to his teaching responsibilities, David pastors two groups on the weekends. He says, "There is a great openness to witnessing and preaching the gospel in this country. Yet at the same time there is persecution from radical Muslim groups that can be challenging." David and his wife, Donnell, are also involved in home Bible study and church ministries.

David Stockwell is a missionary serving with The Christian and Missionary Alliance, a global missionary church. Smith and Stockwell will be speaking to the congregation of the Belle Glade Alliance Church from February 15-18. They will be participating in the Storming the Gates... for the Glory of God missions conference which is open to the public and scheduled each evening at 7 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Sunday. David will be speaking on February 15 and 16 and Connie will be speaking on February 17 and 18.

Approximately 1,150 missionaries are "storming the gates" for God's glory in 45 countries through the ministries of prayer, proclaiming God's word, planting churches, and preparing national church leaders. Each year, local & CMA churches host missions conferences to show how God is using the Alliance to evangelize the unreached and responsive people around the world.

Russell Nagata, associate professor at the University of Florida's Institute of Food and Agricultural Sciences, examines leafminer colonies on romaine lettuce at Belle Glade. He is using genetic engineering to make lettuce resistant to the tiny leafminer insect that tunnels through leaves and makes lettuce unmarketable. The improved lettuce will lower pesticide costs for growers and produce higher quality lettuce for consumers.

Xi Zeta Mu Sorority

The regular monthly meeting of Xi Zeta Mu met on January 26th in the offices of the Glades Health Survey Board, with Sandra Chamblee serving as hostess and Barbara Meroney co-hostess. Prior to the business meeting a buffet dinner was enjoyed by all and was followed by an insightful and educational program delivered by Bryan Marsh M.S. of Dartmouth University. Dr. Marsh spoke on the upcoming survey and study planned for approximately 800 Glades residents who will be chosen randomly for a study of tuberculosis and related diseases.

This survey and study could provide information on how TB is spread. That knowledge could help prevent the spread of the contagious disease. The survey will cover a two year period.

During the meeting it was announced that the anniversary luncheon will be held Saturday, February 21st at Banks Forest Country Club. Laura Mae Enfinger was the gift raffle winner. The next monthly meeting will be held on February 23rd at the home of Karen Corbin who will serve as Hostess and Laverne Motes as Co-Hostess. Members in attendance were Florence Acree, Sandra Chamblee, Meloyne Cochran, Karen Corbin, Laura Mae Enfinger, Janise Goforth, Judy McMillan, Linda McMillan, Pat McKee, Barbara Meroney, Laverne Motes, Sara Nell Phillips, Gloria Swager, Laurel Tarr and Greadle York.

SPECIAL THANKS!

The family of the late Nina Shirley would like to extend our heartfelt thanks to everyone who helped make the burden of our loss a little easier. Please know that we appreciate all the flowers, phone calls, visits, cards, food, prayers and donations made to the Church of the Nazarene and other organizations.

We would like to send a Special Thanks to Pastor Bill Dever and his wife, Mikki, who were with us much of the time. We also want to thank the Nazarene Church Family for all that they have done.

She has begun her journey without us to a much better place. A place where there is no suffering. Even so, she will be with us more than words can express.

May God's love shine down on all of you!

ESOL field trip to US Sugar

By Mrs. Roz Jacobs
Spanish/English teacher
The School of CHOICE

The foreign language speaking students at The School of CHOICE were very happy to be part of the wonderful Chamber of Commerce bus tour this past November. We at CHOICE, have an ESOL program, which means we strive to teach our speakers of foreign languages the necessary skills for success in an English-speaking environment.

We have students from Haiti, Mexico, Columbia, Venezuela and Puerto Rico among others. Learning a new language at any age is very challenging. Special classes and teachers devote extra time to this very important task. Four of our students went on the tour to US Sugar and the plant at Bryant as well.

It was extremely exciting to see the process, step by step of how the cane is harvested, collected, burned, selected and distributed. Basically we saw the entire process making three stops - two in Clewiston and the one in Pahokee.

A field, chosen in advance of our bus trip, was actually burned just so we could watch the process. The bus held 35 people mostly tourists who were camping around the Lake - the 3 - 4 members and several local chamber people, myself, my students and another teacher from Pahokee High School. We proceeded then to a lovely lunch at the Clewiston Inn, all very generously provided by US Sugar. There MR. Robert Coker explained to us various aspects of the sugar-producing company. He was very enlightening and my students learned a lot from his talk as well.

On the way back to the chamber office we stopped at the third and last stop at Bryant. There we saw the final process called "slicing" which is how the final product is air-dried then distributed into large piles for the packaging process that finally leads to our supermarket shelves.

The four students who attended were: Rita Jeanty who said "It was nice", Johnny Belin who was amazed at the machines used in the process and who thought and stated that maybe one day he could get a job at a plant as a machinist.

We also had two good friends, Marlene Raymond and Patricia Thelemague who were enthralled with all the sights and sounds of the big production process and exclaimed "WOW" in both English and Haitian Creole.

All in all it was a very educational and exciting trip for all of us, both student and teacher alike.

Grandparents' Role is Vital

Students perform in All State Chorus

(NU) - How important are grandparents in today's complex society? Very important, according to T. Berry Brazelton, a noted pediatrician and author of many books on family and child development. Brazelton, who chairs the Pampers Parenting Institute, is adamant about the essential role of grandparents in today's society. "Your active participation instills a sense of family and continuity that adds to your grandchildren's feelings of belonging and security," he says. For more information on child and parenting topics, visit Dr. Brazelton's home page at www.pampers.com.

Larry Coonfare

Bay Performing Arts Center. The two students traveled to Tampa a couple of days ahead of the scheduled concert day for rehearsals, which included at least five hours of practice time each day. Alexa Staats joined 300 other seventh and eighth graders from around the state in performing six musical selections before a large crowd at the convention center. She was directed by noted composer and educator Dr. Z. Randall Stroope, the director of the University of Nebraska and the music director of the Nebraska Children's Chorus.

Alexa Staats

When more than 500 students from all over the state of Florida gathered in Tampa on Jan. 10 to perform with the All-State Chorus for the Florida Music Educators' Association, for the first time in the school's history, two Glades Day School students were among them. Senior Larry Coonfare, who qualified for the state chorus by passing intense oral and written exams and auditions, was selected to the All-State Senior High Concert Chorus and eighth grader Alexa Staats, who also had to pass the rigorous exams and auditions, sang with the All-State Treble Chorus at the Tampa

"It was thrilling to be up there performing for all those people," said Staats. "I learned a lot and also made some new friends." Staats will also join classmate and Junior Glee Club member Vanessa Horta as a part of the "Spotlight on Young Musicians" concert at the Kravis Center in May. Horta had also qualified for the All-State Chorus but, because of the intense competition and the large number of young musicians vying for the choir, only one student could get a spot in the treble choir.

Dr. Larry Wyatt, of the University of South Carolina, was the guest conductor for the Senior High Chorus, of which Larry Coonfare took part. Coonfare, who was enthused over the time he enjoyed rehearsing and performing with the other students, credited Dr. Wyatt with doing an extraordinary job of molding the 355 students together to create great sounds. "It was amazing that so many of us had never met each other but we were able to accompany each other in such a short period of time," said Coonfare. "But, Dr. Wyatt had a great attitude and he knew how to make us create the proper sounds at just the right time. I learned so much in such a short amount of time, and it was great to talk to others about music and know they understood and felt the same way. They made it easy to sing a capella in such a large group."

Facing a crowd of more than 2,500 visitors, the Senior High Chorus performed musical selections that included Hodie, Christus natus est by Healy Willan, Pater Noster by Schulz/Wyatt and Awake the Trumpet's Lofly Sound by Handel. "We actually sang seven songs," said Coonfare, adding that three were in Latin, one in German, and three in English. "I couldn't really tell you which I liked best because they had their own unique aspect about them. I had so many emotions while I was performing. I could feel the reverberation of our voices shake the building and chills just ran up and down my spine. The audience's response was truly awesome!"

Joel Everett and Elisha "Buddy White" Baines, Pioneer of the Year.

Shirley Jarriel and Kansas Mae Todd, Pahoek's Pioneer of the Year

Pahoek's Pioneer of the Year

Last year a tradition was begun when two pioneers were recognized. We've decided that this will be an ongoing tradition so that we can give honor to as many of these irreplaceable groups as possible.

This year's honoree came to Pahoek in the thirties. He worked in agriculture for many years. For more than 50 years, he owned and operated a grocery store in the city of Pahoek and is now semi-retired. He has served on numerous boards including: Everglades Regional Medical Center, Palm Beach County Health Planning Council Board and The Legal Service

Board.

He has received a multitude of awards including: Unsung Hero Award - PBC Imperial Men and Women's Club, Outstanding Service Award - Pahoek Chamber of Commerce, Martin Luther King, Jr. Memorial Award - Concerned Citizens of Pahoek, Outstanding Service to Community Award - CYCI and Parents on Patrol Paul Rogers Service Award.

He is a 50 year member of Shiloh Missionary Baptist Church, Rev. Larry White, Pastor.

He is married with children to Mrs. Lucy Baines.

Pahoek's Pioneer of the Year

Our next Pioneer of the year was born in Mississippi on May 11, 1905 to Whiteford and Fanny Singleton Todd.

In 1914, the family moved to Plant City, FL.

In July 1918, they boarded Captain Johnson's boat, The Osceola and came across the lake to make their home in East Beach which was later named Pahoek. They lived in the Red Top packing house until their own house was built on Bacom Point Road.

After a short-lived marriage which produced a son called "Tiny", Kansas Mae Todd, an early resident, worked in a dry goods store in Canal Point, later gaining ownership of the store.

During World War II, when goods of all kind were scarce, the store was closed and she became a postal clerk, remaining in that position for 25 years until retirement.

In some places the beginning of Lent starts with a carnival. The word comes from the Latin carnelevium, which means removal of meat.

Paul Allen accepted the Distinguished Service Award presented to Life Builders

Pahoek High School Basketball

By Sharonada Wade
Pahoek H.S. Student

The Pahoek Blue Devils hosted Pope John Paul basketball team, Friday night.

The first half of the ball game Pope John Paul came out on the court adding points on the visitors score board. With the score being, Pahoek 4 and Pope John Paul 24 in the first half, the Pahoek Blue Devils knew that they had to play a little bit harder and more determined than the next team.

After halftime the Pahoek Blue Devils showed there strength and ability to win the game, but Pope John Paul was too far ahead.

The final score was Pahoek 56, Pope John Paul 81.

The show down between the Pahoek Blue Devils basketball team and Glades Central Raiders took place at Pahoek High Gymnasium.

Once again both team's fans were wondering which team would win the conference game.

Although the weather was very cold, a large amount of fans came out to give their support to the Devils and the Raiders.

As soon as the Pahoek Blue Devils and the Glades Central Raiders stepped on the court both sides of the bleachers went wild calling their teams names.

Anquan Boldin had 26 points, 9 rebounds, and 3 assists. Bernard Jackson added 16 points and kept taking the ball away from Glades Central with 10 rebounds.

In the last half of the ball game the score board showed a tie.

The game went into overtime with both teams heading for the sidelines to go over their game plan with their coaches.

As the players headed back on the court, the fans began to stand to their feet and both teams coaches started pacing back and forth.

In overtime Boldin scored 4 points and Jackson 3 for Pahoek. The Pahoek Blue Devils proved once again that they can handle any team!

Final score was Pahoek 63, Glades Central 61.

Tuesday, February 3, the Pahoek Blue Devils basketball team traveled to Forest Hill's Gymnasium.

Forest Hill's bleachers were full with nonstop cheering fans that were hoping that their home team would defeat the visitors, and that's just what Forest Hill did.

But the Pahoek Blue Devils put up a very strong fight to the end. The first half of the game, Shunard Edmond scored 16 points and team-mate Kenny Smith added 9 points to the score.

Anquan Boldin scored 14 points and Bernard Jackson had 8 points both for the Pahoek Blue Devils.

Although the Pahoek Blue Devils played very hard, Forest Hill came out victorious.

The final score was Pahoek 64, Forest Hill 77.

Glades Day Gator Tales

Happy Valentine's Day!

Cupid will be making his rounds at GDS a day early this year, using the sophomores as messengers in handing out carnations to friends and sweethearts on Friday. It's an annual fund raising project for the tenth graders, as they start looking ahead to sponsoring the prom their junior year.

NHS and NJHS members had a great time when they volunteered to help out at the Arts West Festival at PBOC's Glades Campus last Wednesday, February 4. The NHS students, who had taken lessons in juggling over the past few weeks, entertained adults and children alike by dressing up as mimes and performing juggling and clown acts.

"The whole day was a lot of fun," said senior Kelly Vickery. "We really enjoyed performing for the little kids and watching them get excited."

NJHS members also did their part by helping teachers who brought their classes to watch the performances, and working the various "hands-on" art booths set up for the kids.

Another group who got in on the action was the Junior Glee Club, who performed several songs for the audience, including the tune "Harmony," which featured a solo by eighth grader Vanessa Horta.

"The kids did really well," said Glee Club director Mrs. Lynn Pernezy. "We had fun rehearsing these songs, at least one of which we are planning for our Spring Concert, so it gave them a chance to see the reaction of the audience to their performance."

Last week, we reported the success of the Penny Roll Day in the high school. Now, the elementary has come up with another use for the pennies - the gym fund. Students are encouraged to bring in their pennies and any loose change for their own "Change War."

The class who raises the most money during the month of February will get a free field trip and pizza party. The proceeds will go towards the gym squares. The winning class will also have their name included with the GDS Elementary name that will appear on the plaque that will be hung in the school's Robert L. Mace Athletic Center.

GDS congratulates eighth graders Eric Wingate and Christin Hartzog, who were named king and queen of the junior high dance held last Friday, Feb. 6! Students in grades 9-12 will have their turn with the MORP dance scheduled for Friday, Feb. 20.

MORP is everything back-wards of PROM, so it's the girls' turn to ask the guys, and dress will be casual. The dance will be held in Tripp Hall from 9 p.m. - 1 a.m. Advance tickets will go on sale Feb. 17 for $3 each. They will be $6 at the door, so plan to get yours early!

Reminder to parents: Monday, Feb. 16, is a school holiday in honor of Presidents Day.
